

VITA MARINA

SNAIL PACK

2nd Issue - December 1997

To inform malacologists and conchologists around the world about meetings, conferences and developments, and as an advertisement medium for professionals and amateurs, VITA MARINA organizes a direct mailing on a yearly basis to about 6500 malacologists, shellers, institutes, book dealers, shell dealers and publishers of malacological books. The special theme of last year was the Internet which is rapidly becoming a popular communication medium among shellers and malacologists. This year, our theme is just the fun of responsible shell collecting and studying, illustrated by pictures of some great shelling spots around the world and some of Leo's cartoons.

REI DOM CARLOS

CAMPANHAS OCEANOGRÁFICAS

Oceanographic Campaigns

ESTUDO DAS COLEÇÕES MALACOLÓGICAS

Malacological Collections Study

MARIA CÂNDIDA CONSOLADO MACEDO

This book covers the Malacological collections of D. Carlos (1863-1908), King of Portugal, result of several oceanographic campaigns in Portugal, Madeira and Azores coast, and today presented in the Vasco da Gama Aquarium (Lisbon).

More than 326 species of 99 families are mentioned with information about habitat, distribution, shell photographs and campaigns crop reference. Unique illustrations, photographs and maps witness an active period of the Marine Biology in Portugal.

This work is a great contribution to the history of the Portuguese Malacology and a useful tool to all collectors of the Atlantic ocean and Mediterranean sea shells.

AN ESSENTIAL MOLLUSC REFERENCE

Mollusca: The Southern Synthesis Fauna of Australia Vol. 5

Australian Biological Resources Study

The phylum Mollusca is one of the most significant components of biodiversity throughout the world. Internationally, molluscs are an important economic resource and they are increasingly serving as environmental indicators in areas such as monitoring the health of water bodies. The cost of controlling diseases transmitted via molluscs and minimising crop destruction by pest species is measured in the hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

Mollusca is the most comprehensive and authoritative treatment yet of Australia's marine, freshwater and terrestrial molluscs. It is a significant international reference, with contributions from 70 authors, and in which some 7700 papers in the primary literature are cited. The majority of molluscan families described are also found in the northern hemisphere making this title an essential reference for malacologists around the world.

Mollusca provides a series of overviews at one or more levels for the phylum and six classes, introducing accounts for the 423 molluscan families presently recognised in the region.

At each level details are presented on:

- the morphology and physiology;
- natural history;
- biogeography and phylogeny;
- history of discovery;
- and economic significance.

There is also a comprehensive coverage of the fossil record. The definitions of geological periods in the glossary, and their worldwide equivalents, is extremely helpful.

The book is illustrated profusely with 200 colour and 500 black and white photographs plus over 2500 especially commissioned line drawings by 15 artists. The glossary will assist readers less familiar with special terms and the 30 000 entries in the comprehensive index will ensure ready access to information in the text and figures.

This work is aimed at professional and amateur malacologists and a broad non-specialist readership, including ecologists, biologists, palaeontologists, conservationists, land managers, and senior secondary and tertiary students.
